FIRST FATALITY OF BRISTOL MAN IN WORLD WAR II ANNOUNCED IN TELEGRAM RECEIVED HERE YESTERDAY

Chester W. Terchon Killed in Action in African Area, December 2nd—Enlisted in Army February 13, 1941—Last Visited His Folks Here in May—Was in Infantry

The first fatality of a Bristol man in World War II was announced yesterday when a telegram was received here advising of the death of Chester W. Terchon, 28, of 508 Jefferson avenue.

Terchon was killed in action in defense of his country in the African area, December 2nd, according to the telegram received by the soldier's wife and mother. The telegram was received just before noon yesterday.

Terchon was the son of Mrs. Mary Ferrara, 508 Jefferson avenue, and husband of Julia Terchon. Other survivors are a brother, John; and a sister, Mrs. Albert Dellavolpe. John Ferrara is his stepfather.

The Bristol man enlisted February 13, 1941 and last visited his folks here in May, shortly after which he left for duty overseas. He was in the Infantry. His wife was the former Julia Sagolla, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Peter Sagolla. Terchon was private first class. Graduating from St. Ann's school, here, Terchon was well known and was a member of St. Ann's Club, and played guard on the St. Ann's football team. He was a communicant of St. Ann's Church.

The telegram received at the Terchon home was brief and signed by the adjutant general. It stated that a letter would follow.

Because of his work in the building of the St. Ann's club-house, Terchon was granted a life-time membership. He also participated in several amateur boxing bouts.

Terchon volunteered for service in the Army, he being one of the 15 to leave Bristol on February 13, 1941, for Philadelphia, for assignment to duty. All 15 leaving from the jurisdiction of Selective Service Board No. 1 on that day were volunteers, the group making up the quota for the local board at that time.

Lou Gehrig Featured In "The Pride of The Yankees"

Using the great national game of baseball as its colorful background, Samuel Goldwyn's production of "The Pride of the Yankees" for RKO Radio release brings to the screen both a compelling romance and the inspiring real-life story of a great American hero, Lou Gehrig, the famous first baseman of the New York Yankees—with Gary Cooper starring in the title role. It will open at the Grand Theater this afternoon.

All the sports world knew Gehrig the ball-player, holder of more than a score of diamond records, perhaps the most popular figure the game ever produced. Comparatively few knew Gehrig the man, knew of his struggling boyhood, his ambitions, his college career, his marriage, his personal life. It is this personal phase that forms the basis of the picture, filmed with the co-operation of Mrs. Eleanor Gehrig, who checked every detail to be sure the offering was accurate in its depiction of her famous husband.

The result is said to be an exceptionally impressive and appealing motion picture.

The film story begins in 1914 when the great Christy Mathewson was the idol of American youngsters, when Lou himself was but eleven years old, the son of a poor German immigrant, but passionately devoted to baseball. Urged on by his mother, who is grimly determined her Lou shall become an engineer, he earns his way through Columbia by waiting on table, but in his spare time wins attention for his athletic ability.

When the mother falls ill and needs expensive medical care, Lou gives up his dreams of a profession and turns to baseball in order to make money immediately. A tryout with the Yankees, obtained for him by a friendly newspaperman, brings him a contract and a seasoning period with a minor league club. In 1925 he comes back to the Yankees and begins his record-breaking career with that team—a career that was to establish his all-time figure of 2130 consecutive games.

As Regards the Removal of Snow from Sidewalks in Doylestown

CLAIM GREAT LAXITY

DOYLESTOWN, Dec. 29—Borough Council has decided that enforcement of the ordinance regarding cleaning of snow from sidewalks, adopted a number of years ago, is up to the police.

This decision was made when Chief of Police Felix R. Gowan put before council the question as to who is to enforce the ordinance relating to removal of snow from the sidewalks.

Chief Gowan made the suggestion that whenever complaints regarding the failure to remove snow from the sidewalks or any other complaints are received at the borough office they be reported immediately to the police so that they may take action.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 29.—(INS)—To feed our armed forces, to feed our fighting allies—to win the war—we are going to have to tighten our belts!

The needs of our Army, our Navy, our Marines, plus the needs of our allies and of our territorial possessions will take at least a fourth of all foods we can produce in 1943. On top of this demand, the people in this

CROYDON CHURCH IS SCENE OF A WEDDING

Bogarde-Hayes Nuptials Are Yuletide Week-End Event

GROOM IN THE SERVICE

CROYDON, Dec. 29—With a double ring ceremony being performed in a Christmas setting at St. Luke's Lutheran Church on Saturday evening at five o'clock, Miss Dora F. Hayes, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Hayes, became the wife of Mr. Henry P. Bogarde, son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Bogarde, of Newportville Heights. The pastor of the church, the Rev. Theodore Kohlmeier, officiated.

Miss Frances Mattocks, Newportville Heights, sang "The Lord's Prayer" and "Because," to an accompaniment by the church organist.

A sister of the bride, Miss Elsie Hayes, was the maid of honor; and Miss Betty Bogarde, a sister of the groom, was chosen as bridesmaid. Mr. Harlan Jester was best man for Mr. Bogarde, and the usher was Mr. William Hayes, Jr., a brother of the bride.

The bride, given in marriage, by her father, wore a dress of brocade satin with train. Long sleeves ended in points over the hands, and the neckline was sweetheart style. Her finger-ring veil of illusion was attached to a headpiece of orange blossoms. The bouquet which the former Miss Hayes carried was composed of bridal roses and baby's breath.

The maid of honor wore a gown of blue taffeta, and carried an old-fashioned bouquet of yellow roses and baby's breath. The bridesmaid selected a pink taffeta gown, and an old-fashioned bouquet of talisman roses and baby's breath. The two attendants wore face veils which matched the color tone of their gowns.

The reception for members of the family and a number of friends took place at the Hayes home. The couple then left for Wildwood, N. J., where the groom is stationed with the U. S. Coast Guards. The bride's travelling costume was a two-piece dress of poudre blue crepe, black coat and hat; and her corsage was of red roses. The bride will return to her parents' home here to remain while the groom is in service.

Quakertown Police Are Searching for "Hugger"

QUAKERTOWN, Dec. 29 — Quakertown police are on the alert for a strange and peculiarly-acting man who has been annoying girls after dark.

At least three young women have been accosted within the past week by the man who steps out from shadowy hiding places to make improper advances.

In each case the woman fled in fright without getting a good description of the would-be assailant, and each time the man made a successful get-away.

About a year ago a "hugger" was operating in town and was almost captured by police and firemen with the aid of the powerful searchlights on the fire apparatus. At that time the stranger made his escape through a cemetery.

The present annoyance is believed to be a different person, however, according to his actions and the meager description the police were able to obtain.

ILL PERSONS MUST GET DOCTOR'S O-K FOR FUEL OIL

Physician Must State Temperature He Thinks Necessary For Patient

SEE HEATING ENGINEER

A representative of the Office of Price Administration visited the Bristol Rationing Board Wednesday and imparted some valuable information regarding the granting of auxiliary fuel oil to homes in which sick and infirm persons reside.

The government requires a questionnaire to be filled out, then the applicant must obtain from his doctor, a certificate stating that the home occupied by the person who is sick should have a temperature higher than sixty-five degrees. (He should also state the temperature which he thinks is necessary.)

The applicant must then consult a heating engineer (not a plumber) who must go over the premises and advise what changes can be made to make the building warmer and also must approximate the amount of fuel oil necessary to increase the temperature to that which the doctor has stated will be necessary for the applicant.

These two certificates, one from the doctor and the other from the heating engineer together with the auxiliary application must be sent to the Board. A certificate that can be used on the fourth page of the questionnaire at the top. The Fuel Oil Panel associated with the Board will next consider the application. If they feel that the questions in the questionnaire have been satisfactorily answered they may determine the extra amount of fuel oil required, but in no instance can they allow more than half of the difference between the amount used last year and the allotment granted this year. This extra allotment must be divided over the coldest period, that is the three coldest months, December, January and February.

INJURED BOY STATES HE WASN'T WALKING WITH STINGER LAD

Charles Mitchell is Unable To Throw Light On The Accident

ONE BOY WAS KILLED

Mitchell's Sister and Brother Found His Glove and Shoe Before He Was Located

Officials are endeavoring to determine if death for a Cornwells Heights youth and serious injury to a Bridge-water boy on Christmas eve occurred in two separate accidents, or if one death-car was responsible for striking the two.

The dead youth is W. Robert Stinger, 17, who is believed to have been killed instantly; and the injured boy is Charles Mitchell, aged 16.

It was at first presumed that the two had been walking together and were struck by one car. It was not until hospital officials questioned Mitchell after he regained consciousness two days later that he informed them he did not know the Stinger youth. Several times he has been queried about acquaintanceship with Stinger and he is unable to place the lad in his memory.

Whether the two were walking close to each other enroute West on Route 13 near Croydon bridge when struck, or whether they conversed inasmuch as they were travelling in the same direction, has not as yet been determined.

Upon regaining consciousness Charles' only thought is for the Christmas festivities for his parents and his nine brothers and sisters. That was his last thought on Thursday morning when he left his home for employment with the Penn Valley Construction Company. "Don't worry about Christmas," he told his mother. "I'll come right home tonight and we'll go get a tree, put the trains up for the kiddies, and fix everything up."

And he kept his word insofar as he could. Finishing the job a trifle later than usual he went directly from Bristol to Croydon, stopping for only a moment at Croydon post office to get the mail. The mail was still in his pocket when he was found.

An acquaintance near the Croydon Manor section was of the opinion that when she saw Charles start down the highway toward Bridge-water that another boy accompanied him. The parents of Charles are at a loss to explain this, excepting that the lad made friends readily and might possibly have talked with another pedestrian, possibly Stinger.

It was shortly after 6.30 that Mitchell had stopped at Croydon post office. He had been employed for about two months by Penn Valley Construction Company, and was eagerly awaiting yesterday, when he was scheduled to be transferred from carpentry to plumbing work for that firm.

At about 7.20 p. m., Christmas eve, Charles' sister, Florence, 14, and his brother, James, 12, left their home, taking six smaller children of the family to Croydon where Santa Claus was expected to pay a visit. As they made their way along Bristol Pike, Florence and James found a glove and a shoe about three feet apart. Florence at once recognized them as belonging to her brother Charles. She saw the stitches that her sister had put in the

FORWARD TO VICTORY

Now that the United Nations definitely have taken the initiative in three sectors—Russia, North Africa and the South Pacific—their next step obviously is to crowd in on the enemy from all points of the compass.

With the fall of Tunis and the liquidation of the Axis forces in Africa, the expected invasion of Europe from the south will follow, and although the day the stroke will be delivered cannot previously be divulged, there is every reason to believe that the strategy will call for a gigantic many-pronged effort.

Everything now indicates that launching of an Allied thrust from Africa is to be timed to coincide with Nazi disaster in Russia, and that simultaneous thrusts will be aimed at Norway and across the Channel into France. With Russia visiting vengeance upon the Nazis, Hitler, who whimpered before the war that Germany was encircled, will discover that Germany is indeed the center of a remorselessly constricting ring.

This will be the end of Hitler's mad adventure. He has fought his war by a succession of frontal attacks. He will be crushed by a concerted rebound from all of them. In the Orient, with Japan ousted from the Solomons, New Guinea and Timor, the northward advance island by island will begin. And as this island campaign proceeds the armies of the Allies, with air and sea support, will undertake another campaign against the China Coast, with Japan within bombing distance and American forces closing in for the kill from the Aleutians or from whatever bases are available.

Henceforth, until the end of the war, every day will record new disaster visited upon the twin enemies of civilization, the German and the Jap, until such parts of the populations of these two nations as are left alive are willing to begin the long grind of paying for some of the damage and misery wrought by their barbarity.

RAILROADS DO THE JOB

Most advertising is designed to give information for the purpose of selling something. But in the category of interesting advertising without a sale angle is the series of newspaper advertisements currently sponsored by the nation's railroads.

The railroads do not need to advertise to get business—they're busier than they have ever been. The purpose of their advertising series is to acquaint the people with what the railroads are doing for the national war effort and to bespeak public co-operation in meeting the unprecedented demand for transportation.

The story American railroads have to tell is one of tremendous achievement. More than a million trained railroaders are busy night and day keeping 33,000 trains running on more than 232,000 miles of track. These trains are needed for the transportation of war materials, essential consumer goods, troops and necessary civilian travelers. Every day the railroads move 25,000,000 tons of freight. Since Pearl Harbor they have moved 8,000,000 troops.

This war is essentially a war of movement, and the American railroads are coming through with the greatest mass-transport job in history. When they tell the people what they are doing they are telling facts. And the facts they present entitle them to the utmost in public commendation and co-operation.

"CURIOSITY KILLED A CAT" by ANNE ROWE

SYNOPSIS

Philip Wentworth, noted harbor engineer, and his 24-year-old daughter, Kay, have come to Cliffport, Maine, the former prepared to engage in a U. S. defense project. Kay is in love with Allan Reid, her father's assistant, and is tormented with a secret—an elopement five years before with one Bruce Jollimar, who abandoned her three weeks after their marriage. The Wentworths are living on part of the Ellis Burton estate which is still in litigation. Conley Forrestall is the main local power in the Cliffport shipyards project and he is also an executor of the Burton will. Allan Reid is telling Kay about that will. Kay is the narrator of this story.

CHAPTER TWO

"And what about this house?" I asked.
"Oh, this one isn't important," Allan assured me. "Burton kept it as a kind of refuge for elderly female relatives and such. The part you've rented stood empty at his death, and the executors have let it before, to raise the taxes and pay the maid's salaries. They had to be kept on, according to the will. So you see, even if the missing heir should return tomorrow, there's no great danger he'll turn you out into the street."
"That's a comfort," I told Allan.
"And if he doesn't come, ever, What happens then?"
"She gets it," Allan's thumb jerked ceilingward. "The last lady of the Burtons. She already owns the upper floor, co-operative fashion. All but your two rooms. It was a special legacy, to safeguard her, no doubt. Her name's Galathea—Miss Galathea Burton—and she's crippled in some way. Hardly ever leaves her lair, I've been told."

It sounded appalling. "How awful! To be cooped up that way and be called—Galathea!" I said feebly.

"Yep. Pretty terrible, both of it," Allan agreed. "But she's probably quite old and ill, poor soul, and doesn't mind it much. It would be a kindness though, if you'd call on her."

"Of course I'll call on her," I assured him—with the sneaking thought that all old ladies can be first-rate sources of information. "I suppose I shall have to make quite a lot of calls."

"On the contrary. You'll have a lot of callers," Allan smiled at me. "An old Cliffport custom. If they want to take you up, they call. If they don't, they leave you be. Very sensible. In your case they'll call, in droves."

The prophesy opened an intriguing line of thought. What if a few Jollimars would be among my callers? And I was just going to probe a little farther, when Dad came back from his "nap" with a hopefully expectant look on his face that changed to disappointment when he found us engaged in an obviously unimportant conversation.

His entrance ended my undercover inquiries. From then on, the shipyard was king.

It was, I learned, developing into something much more important than had first been intended. Due to the dreadful conditions in Europe, and the resultant plans of the government, the whole enterprise, or a part of it, might pass out of private hands and become a naval development.

"The harbor is ideal for the launching of heavy craft," Dad explained. "Seventy feet of water at low tide. Granite bottom. Sloping shorelines. You can build a battleship here without a cradle and float it right off. So, what with this town being near the Canadian border, and the clamor for a two-ocean navy—"

Dad was started. He went on and on, into deeper and deeper technicalities, too involved for me to follow.

I dropped into a comfortable chair within reach of the phone.

And so I excused myself. I had left New York at dawn, practically. I was sleepy. But mainly, I had seen a telephone extension upstairs in my bedroom. And where there's a phone, there usually is also a directory—

The room was charming, and warm, and cozy. Judging from its location, it overlooked the garden. But whatever the view,

Lt. Oscar A. Booz Weds A Resident of Milton

At a Christmas Day ceremony in Trinity Lutheran Church, Milton, Lt. Oscar A. Booz, of Fort Myers, Fla., took as his bride, Miss Jane M. Roush, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert J. Roush, of Milton. The groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. James M. Booz, Bristol Township. The clergyman who officiated at the double ring ceremony at four o'clock was the Rev. Paul H. Smith.

The altar vases were filled with white chrysanthemums, and in other vases were arranged white snapdragons. Candles lighted the altar. One hundred and fifty guests attended the ceremony.

Mrs. Byron Good, organist, played the traditional wedding marches, and also a program of appropriate selections prior to the ceremony. The offerings of vocalist, Mrs. Edward Coop, were "Because" and "I Love You Truly."

Miss Betty M. Fry, of Milton, was maid of honor for the former Miss Roush. The groomsmen were Mr. Warren E. Harpster, of Milton; and ushers included: Messrs. Dale Hill and Andrew Mertz, both of Milton. Mr. Roush escorted his daughter to the altar.

The bride gown was of white jersey, it being patterned with a high neck which had lace insets. Sleeves were long and cut full. The full skirt was gathered and was entrain. Her veil of white net was fingertip length, it being attached to a coronet of pearls and orange blossoms. The bride carried a bouquet of gardenias surrounded by white roses, and from this fell a shower of white sweet-peas.

Miss Fry, the maid of honor, was costumed in a gown of sky blue tulle, made with sweetheart neckline, low waistline, and gathered skirt. Her sleeves were three-quarter length. Her Juliet cap was fashioned of pearls; and she carried an arm bouquet of American beauty roses.

The reception which followed the nuptial ceremony was held in the social rooms of the church, with approximately 50 guests present. Table decorations were in keeping with the Yuletide season. The bride and groom left immediately for Florida, Mrs. Booz wearing a two-piece dressmaker suit of dark green bengaline; black and tan accessories, and a gardenia corsage. Lt. and Mrs. Booz will be at home in Fort Myers, Fla., today.

The bride is a graduate of Milton high school, class of 1938; Pennsylvania State College, class of 1942, and has been head of the home economics department at Canton high school. The groom graduated from Bristol high school in 1936; Penna. State College in 1940; and was engaged as an analytical food chemist for Francis H. Leggett & Co., Landisville, N. J., until 1 1/2 years ago when he entered the army. He received his commission as a second lieutenant last May in the Army Air Force. He is at present an instructor in the gunnery school at Fort Myers.

For the ceremony the mother of the bride chose a black and white flowered crepe dress, and corsage of red roses. Mrs. Booz, mother of the groom, wore a dress of wine crepe, and a corsage of talisman roses.

Hear us, O God, as we humbly come before thy throne of Grace confessing that we have fallen short of the hopes and aspirations which dwell within our hearts as this year was opened. ALL SCORING RECORDS OF SEASON SHATTERED AS FLEETWINGS SWAMPS HUNTER FIVE; SCORE ENDS 70 TO 51

All scoring records of the season were shattered in the Hunter's-Fleetwings game as the Arrows swamped the muniton workers, 70-51, in one of the highest scoring matches ever played on the Mutual A floor.

To begin with the 121 points in 32 minutes of playing is a new record while Charlie Harker broke the individual scoring mark of the season with 28 points. Harker did not break the standing league mark of 33 points in a game but Harker's score was made in eight minute quarters while the record was made while 10 minute quarters were in progress. The 70 points scored by Fleetwings is also a new mark for the season.

Despite the high score, the game was closely played until the final period. The Hunter team matched the Arrows point for point until the final session. Both teams had little or no defense to offer and very little fouling was done, the players letting one another shoot.

The only defensive player in the tilt was Devon Smith, former Western Michigan star, who broke up many Hunter plays and was also the pivot man on the Fleetwings' passes. To add to his night's work, Smith scored 15 points. "Mike" Delevich also added to the Fleetwings' total with 12 points.

Albert Barbetta and Gene Ashton led Hunter's in scoring with 13 and 11 points, respectively. Palumbo had 10 points to add to his season's total.

DIAMOND TEAM WINS FIFTH STRAIGHT GAME

Although extended to an overtime period, the Diamond team won its fifth straight game of the Bristol Basketball League last night on the Mutual A floor, topping the Rohm and Haas quintet, 37-29. The triumph increased the Diamond grip on first place in the circuit.

Score at the end of the regulation game was 29-29, 2nd Lieut. Johnny Cole, U. S. Army, scoring the tying point when he dropped in a foul shot with less than a minute remaining to be played. But in the overtime session, the chemical workers were blanked while Profy, Teddy Sak, and Balon scored field goals for the winners with Sak getting a pair.

The game was close throughout with the Rohm and Haas boys leading most of the way, the Diamond team lagging behind until the final period when a spurt gave them a slight edge. Shooting by Buck Profy and Aaron Boyle gave the Mill streeters the lead but not for long as Klein and DeLuca scored the goals which put the chemical workers in the lead.

As Boyle was fouled, Klein was forced to leave the game because of having four personal fouls. Boyle converted and Diamond went into the lead until Cole scored the point which deadlocked the count and the extra period was necessary.

Sak and Profy scored 18 of the winners' total of points, having 10 and 8, respectively. For the losing combination, DeLuca had four field goals while Carnvale and Cole scored six points each.

VOLTZ TEAM BREAKS INTO WIN COLUMN

The Voltz-Texaco team finally broke into the win column of the Bristol Basketball League, defeating the Farruggio team, 31-23, in another upset of the season. The defeat put the Farruggio boys two games away from the league-leading Diamond outfit.

Only in the last period did the Farruggio men show up as they did in previous matches. In this session they accounted for nine points while holding the gasoleers to four markers.

"Bucky" Bucknum was the outstanding star of the game as he continually was in possession of the ball for the Voltz-men and aided by scoring nine points, one more than his team-mate, Vallas.

Populace Will Tighten Belts In Order That War May Be Won

This is where the consumer comes into the game and with a vitally important part to play. With 32,000,000 housewives buying food, every single order counts. Wise buying is called for. Waste must be stopped. As Secretary Wickard has said, "It is as important to save a pound of food as to produce one."

The government is the largest single buyer of food—for our armed forces, our allies, and for our territories. But the quantity of food it buys—tremendous though it now is—may be even greater in the days and months ahead. A few weeks ago government requirements for military and Allied needs were estimated at one-fifth of the total U. S. food production. Today they are estimated at one-fourth, tomorrow it may be even more.

Adjusting our food supplies to the demands of the United Nations' food program will mean more sacrifices, more stringent regulations, larger quantities of foods for direct war use, and more rationing so that everyone will receive a fair share of the food that is available.

We're going to be inclined to grumble a bit at some of these restrictions, and because we can't get some of the foods we especially like or have become accustomed to getting regularly. In a democracy we have and are fighting to maintain this right. And perhaps it does some good to let off steam. When it comes right down to it, though, we'll skip on our food supply at home, and gladly, before we skip on our fighting forces.

Charge Police With Enforcing Ordinance

Chester Erwin, who was seated as a member of Council to take the place of Jenks H. Watson, who resigned, said there should be some definite understanding between the borough office and the police. He suggested also that in case the property owners fail to remove the snow in the specified six working hours after the snow has ceased to fall, as stated in the ordinance, the borough employees remove the snow and that the property owners be charged for the work.

Councilman G. Thawley Hayman stated that usually after a heavy snow borough employees are busy removing snow from the streets, and that it is not up to them to remove the snow from the sidewalks.

Urging Council to get after people who neglect to remove the snow from the sidewalks, Burgess John J. Sweney said: "We have been entirely too lax in the enforcement of this ordinance."

Suggestion was made that persistent violators of the ordinance be sent notices that the snow must be removed within the specified time.

Several members of council called attention to the fact that the condition of the sidewalks at several places on South Main street and at the intersection of West Court street and North Clinton street constitutes a hazard.

During a meeting of Council last month a representative of an insurance firm appeared before Council with the suggestion that it take out what is known as a general comprehensive liability insurance policy. A brief discussion followed, and at that time several of the members expressed the opinion that property owners are responsible for the sidewalks and that they can be held liable in case of an accident. Borough Solicitor Wesley Bunting stated that the borough might be held responsible in case of an accident if the property owners had been directed to make repairs, but had failed to do so.

President George F. Smith referred the matter to the finance committee with instructions to report at the next meeting of Council.

Council very briefly discussed the matter of removing the abandoned tracks of Philadelphia Traction Company on South Main street. Councilman Hayman, of the street committee, stated that he does not believe this will be done this winter.

Councilman Hayman also stated a search had revealed that what is known as Hart Alley, running from Taylor street to Ashland, between Donaldson avenue and Main street, is a public thoroughfare. This, he explained, means that council can make repairs to the alley and that it also can regulate traffic on it. Some persons, it was stated, have been making a practice of throwing ashes on the alley, and Council agreed to request that this be discontinued.

discovery of the lifeless body was made at 11 a. m.

In the car was found a note which read: "Turned on key at three a. m. Now going for a long sleep. Notify my wife, Anna F. Rudden, at 5585 N. Hill-creek Drive, Olney, Philadelphia."

It is stated that one neighbor had noticed the motor of the Rudden machine running. During the morning other neighbors saw the car parked beside the bungalow with a piece of flexible metal hose or pipe extending up the side of the car. Investigation by neighbors led to discovery of Rudden's lifeless body on the right side of the front seat.

It is stated that a pipe, attached to the exhaust pipe, extended into the rear side window, which had been closed, the small opening remaining being stuffed with a blanket. About the man's feet and legs was wrapped a blanket.

In addition to his wife, Mr. Rudden is survived by a sister. He was employed by Snellenburg's, Philadelphia. The body was removed to the Haefer funeral home here, and last evening was forwarded to Philadelphia. Burial will be made in Hillside Cemetery, Philadelphia, tomorrow.

Deputy coroner of Bucks County, J. Alfred Rigby, Cornwells Heights, issued a certificate giving cause of death as "suicide by carbon monoxide gas." Penna. Motor Police of South Langhorne barracks were also summoned.

glove when she mended it the day previous. Continuing to a store in Croydon the children soon started back home, but the thought of the glove and shoe which they had found bothered them so much that they stopped at a gasoline station and asked if there had been an accident, as they feared their brother had been hurt. Just after they received a negative answer, Frank McClintock, 12, of Bridgewater, hurried into the gasoline station to seek help, saying that someone had been injured near the bridge. The Mitchell children hurried home to tell their mother, Mrs. James Mitchell, who with others rushed to the scene. Mrs. Mitchell asked to see the youth who had been placed in an Army ambulance which had been flagged, but was asked to await until police arrived. While the group stood anxiously about, moans were heard coming from down the embankment on the other side of the guard-rail. Without hesitating Mrs. Mitchell ran to the guard-rail and flashed her light down the slope as did several others. The sight that met her eyes was that of her son endeavoring to raise himself. She quickly gained the other side of the rail and was at Charles' side.

The two lads were taken to Harrison Hospital, Robert Stinger being pronounced dead upon arrival. Mitchell suffered a fracture of the skull and other injuries. He did not regain consciousness until Saturday, but at intervals conversed with hospital officials and members of his family.

Fighting French headquarters in London confirmed that an agreement under which French Somaliland comes over to the side of Gen. Charles de Gaulle was signed last night.

Soviets Advance 18 Miles

Moscow—Red army division sweeping southwest from Stalingrad advanced 18 miles since yesterday, by-passed the key railroad junction of Kotelnikov and killed 3,000 more Germans, making a total of 20,000 since December 12. U. S. Battleship Hit Uncharted Reef

Washington—Secretary of the Navy Frank Knox disclosed today that an American battleship hit an uncharted reef in the early stage of the war but has long since been repaired.

Knox did not disclose where the accident occurred.

"I don't think there is any harm in saying now that a battleship did hit an uncharted reef in the early stage of the war," Knox stated. "It has been repaired a long, long time ago."

Knox made his statement in commenting on reports of the accident carried in a newspaper column.

since. When questioned about his acquaintance with Stinger he is quite puzzled, being unable to recognize the name.

The two lads were lying about 15 or 20 feet from each other, Stinger being part way under the guard-rail and Mitchell all the way over and a distance down the embankment. A tie pin worn by the Stinger lad was found some distance away near the bridge.

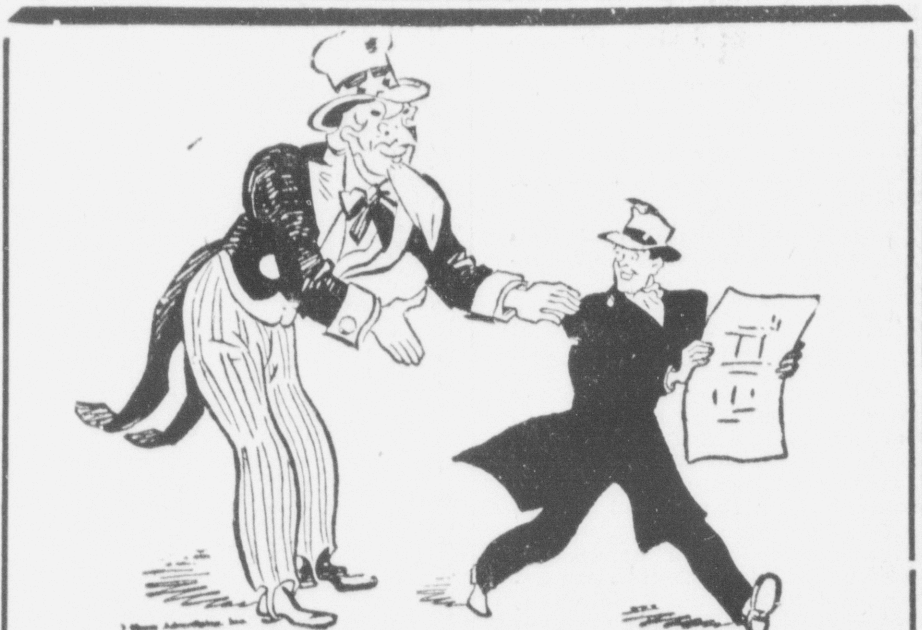

Mitchell's father, James D. Mitchell, is still under the care of a physician, he also being the victim of a hit-run accident on November 14th. He was struck by an automobile on Bristol Pike, Croydon, within a stone's throw of where his son was injured last week. Mr. Mitchell returned to his employment just one week ago.

Charles, eagerly anticipating Christmas, had purchased a gift for his mother, also presents for some others, and these he had locked in his father's car, anxious to keep his mother's gift a secret. The keys of the car were in his pocket when he was struck, his father having given him use of the machine. Mr. Mitchell, in a hurry to reach his son when the news of the accident came, attempted to break the door lock, he having only a key for the ignition.

The funeral of Robert Stinger is to be held at the home of his father, William F. Stinger, Woodbine avenue, tomorrow at two p. m., with burial in Bristol Cemetery. Friends may call this evening.

The Great Game of Politics

has shown that inducements of this kind are totally unnecessary. For entertaining the troops in camps the Hollywood stars are fine, but in selling bonds to the people of the United States in support of the war this cheap show-girl stuff is out of place. Selling war bonds is a deeply serious matter. The arguments and the appeal should be free from frivolities and untainted by personal publicity suspicions. The drives should be conducted on the highest level. That was the way they were conducted in the last war; that is the way the current drive has been conducted and the popular response has been heartwarming and overwhelming.

ANOTHER thing which, perhaps, the success of this drive has taught the Treasury is the wisdom of accepting the advice and aid of leading men in the financial world, despite their anti-New Deal sentiments and their lack of admiration for Mr. Roosevelt. The Treasury tendency in the past has been to regard all such men as sinister and unclean. This was particularly true if they came from New York. Such of them as got into the Treasury stayed only a short while. The result has been that, notwithstanding Mr. Morgenthau's wistful longings for fiscal soundness, Treasury policies have been shaped almost entirely by theoretical amateurs and inspired by politicians of the "tax, tax, tax, spend, spend, spend, elect, elect, elect" school of New Dealers.

THAT was not so good before the war. Since Pearl Harbor, Mr. Morgenthau has called in various outside men of experience and did create an advisory committee on which were several of the leading New York financiers. But, he either did not take their advice or asked for it after the decision had been made. Realizing that the problems with which the Treasury now has to deal are unprecedentedly great, it required no special vision to see trouble coming. It came all right in October when the last Treasury offering of four billion was made. That was so shocking a flop that it created the gravest apprehension inside the Treasury as well as outside.

THE scare was so great that in preparing for the present drive the Treasury abandoned its prejudices and not only sought but took the advice of the most competent men it could find. It adopted their suggestions both as to the character of the bonds and the character of the campaign. It called upon them for aid in building up a great selling organization of trained bond salesmen; in mapping out the country and in planning the publicity. Subscriptions of over ten billion in nineteen days certainly seem to justify both the advisers and the advised. It was a great national achievement. Failure would have been calamitous.

THE hope, of course, is that having found the advice of the New York financiers disinterested and sound and their aid unstinted and effective, the Treasury will now cast its suspicions to the wind and, accepting the fact that it really is possible to be patriotic without being pro-New Deal, continue to benefit by the counsel of the best available financial brains in the country, until now not represented in Washington. It even may be not too much to hope that in the preparation of his 1943 taxation program, the Secretary of the Treasury will give more weight to their views than to those who continue to think that tax bills should be shaped primarily to appeal to the voters and are still "horrid" at the suggestion of a sales tax.

ALSO, with full knowledge that in the spring another big drive must be made, the thought, unaided, ought to occur to the Treasury that the most potent possible appeal to the people will be the assurance that their money is not and will not be wasted. Concrete evidence of rigid retrenchment in every non-war governmental activity will sell a thousand times more bonds to a heavily taxed people than the whole of Hollywood.
